Japan's best rows of Alexander palm trees

These are the only rows of Alexander palm trees that can be seen in Japan. The palm trees have been cultivated over a long period of time and create a mysterious space as they stretch toward the sky.

This is one of the largest outdoor botanical gardens in Japan and has more than 50,000 plants and 1,300 species.

A wonderful world of plants

At the Southeast Botanical Gardens, it is possible to view palm trees and other tropical and subtropical plants that have been gathered from all over the world growing naturally in the vast grounds, not in a greenhouse.

It is also a paradise resort that can be enjoyed by families and couples, with a restaurant serving dishes made with herbs grown in the Gardens and fresh vegetables from the prefecture, areas to enjoy animal encounters, and experience programs that incorporate the natural world.
